aberrate: affect with aberration: a departure from rational thought or behavior. Aberration means basically to err, to make mistakes, or more specifically to have fixed ideas which are not true. The word is also used in its scientific sense. It means departure from a straight line. If a line should go from A to B, then if it is aberrated it would go from A to some other point, to some other point, to some other point, to some other point, to some other point, and finally arrive at B. Taken in its scientific sense, it would also mean the lack of straightness or to see crookedly as, for example, a man sees a horse but thinks he sees an elephant. Aberrated conduct would be wrong conduct, or conduct not supported by reason. Aberration is opposed to sanity, which would be its opposite. From the Latin, aberrare, to wander from; Latin, ab, away, errare, to wander. —Academy Level II Glossary app Jan 91

Adam: (Bible) the first man. —APA Glossary (app 11.7.90)

Adam and Eve: in the Bible, the first man and the first woman. The first book of the Bible tells that God created Adam by breathing life into the "dust of the ground." Later, God created Eve from Adam's rib. God placed Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden, telling them that they could eat the fruit of all the trees in the garden except the fruit of the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil. They lived happily until the serpent, Satan, tempted Eve to eat the forbidden fruit.

She ate, and gave the fruit to Adam, who also ate; they immediately became aware and ashamed of their nakedness. Because of Adam and Eve's disobedience, God drove them from the garden into the world outside. After their expulsion, Eve gave birth to sons, first Cain and Abel, and then Seth, and thus Adam and Eve became the parents of mankind. —SHSBC Binder 5 Approved Glossary

- ally: a person recorded in the reactive mind of the preclear about whom the preclear makes the reactive computation that this person is necessary to the preclear's survival. An ally is an individual who cooperates with, supports and helps another for a common object; a supporter, a friend. In Dianetics, it basically means someone who protects a person who is in a weak state and becomes a very strong influence over the person. The weaker person, such as a child, even partakes of the characteristics of the ally so that one may find that a person who has, for instance, a bad leg, has it because a protector or ally in his youth had a bad leg. The word is from French and Latin and means to bind together. —Science of Survival Glossary (app 11.7.90)

applecart, upset this old: (informal) ruin a plan or what is being done; change how things are or are being done, often unexpectedly; ruin or mix up another person's success or plan for success. This phrase comes from the fact that until the nineteenth century roads were generally rough and streets were narrow. For country people, the mere act of getting themselves and their goods to market safely over considerable distances was quite an achievement. One can imagine how annoyed they must have been when the carts containing their precious produce were toppled over, particularly if they had perishable items such as apples, which would become damaged when scattered and ruin the hopes of a profitable sale. —PDC Volume 5 Approved Glossary

- assists: plural of assist, the straight perception-by-perception running over and over of an incident until it is desensitized as a facsimile and cannot affect the preclear. The assist is used immediately after accidents or operations. It takes away shock and most of the harmful effects of the incident and promotes healing. It is done by starting the individual at the beginning of the incident, with the first awareness of the incident, just as though the preclear were living it all the way through again with full perception of sight, sound, etc., as nearly as they can be obtained. An assist run, for instance, immediately after a dental operation takes all the shock out of the operation. One concludes an assist by picking up the auditing as another incident and running through the auditing and the decision to be audited. An assist saves lives and materially speeds healing. —APA Glossary (app 11.7.90)

astral bodies: somebody's delusion. Astral bodies are usually mock-ups which the mystic then tries to believe real. He sees the astral body as something else and then seeks to inhabit it in the most common practices of "astral walking." Anyone who confuses astral bodies with thetans is apt to have difficulty with theta clearing for the two things are not the same order of similarity. The exteriorization of a thetan, when actually accomplished, is so complete and thorough and is attended by so many other phenomena, that anyone who has made an effort to relate these two things is quite certain to recant after he has been theta cleared. The most noteworthy difference is that the thetan does not have a body. Production of illusion to which he then sought to assign most reality is probably the underlying factor which makes mysticism so aberrative. Data from India, even that found in the deepest "mysteries" of India, is knowingly or unknowingly "booby-trapped," so that while it contains, though unevaluated and isolated, many essential truths, it contains as well directions which are certain to send the experimenter even more deeply into the unwanted state of becoming mest. Until recently, the nearest one could come to studying the actuality of existence was through the field of mysticism and its value should not be discounted, but its effect is to deliver an entirely opposite result to any experimenter luckless enough to hope to reach cause by becoming an effect as required in mysticism. Seeing and feeling "nonexistences" is frightening and harmful only when one seeks to believe them to be existences. Only when he knows he has created them can he obtain a certainty upon them. One can create hallucination for himself only by insisting that what he has created was otherwise created—in short, refusing to accept responsibility for his own created illusions. —LRH, 8-8008 - Scientology 8-8008 Glossary Final approval c. 3 Mar 1990

astral body: a second body, per some forms of philosophical or religious thought, said to belong to each individual, formed of a substance which is above or beyond perception by the senses and which pervades all space. Per these beliefs, the astral body accompanies the individual through life, is able to leave the human body at will, and survives the individual after death. axes to grind, have a lot of: (colloquial) have a lot of special reasons of one's own for being involved in something. This expression is from a story entitled “Who'll Turn the Grindstone?” first published in 1811. It purports to relate an incident in the boyhood of the author: One morning a man with an ax over his shoulder greeted the boy most pleasantly and asked if his father had a grindstone. When the boy said, “Yes,” the man complimented him upon his good looks and intelligence and asked if he might borrow the use of the stone. The boy, flattered by the attention, was sure that he could. The man then remarked that the boy appeared to be unusually strong for his age. The lad fell for all this flattery, and before he knew it he had been tricked into turning the stone until the very dull ax was as sharp as a razor. Just then the school bell was heard to ring; the man's manner changed abruptly, and without a word of thanks or a coin, he berated the boy for being a sluggard and ordered him to be off instantly so as not to be late for school. —PDC Volume 5 Approved Glossary

bill: a proposed law to be voted on by a lawmaking body. In the United States Congress, a bill may be introduced in either the House or the Senate. For a bill to become law, it has to go through a very precise procedure. First it is assigned a number and then is printed. If the bill is introduced in the House, it first has to be approved through a House committee and then passed by the whole House. It then is sent to the Senate, where it goes through the same procedure. If the Senate makes any amendments to the bill, then it has to go back to the House to be reapproved. When a bill is finally approved by both the House and Senate, it is sent to the President for his signature. See also House and Senate in this glossary. —Games Congress Gls (Approved 13.8.92)

black sun: (astronomy) an object (also known as black hole) so massive that nothing, not even light, can escape its gravitation. Black holes were given their name because they absorb all the light that falls on them. The existence of black holes was first predicted by the general theory of relativity, which states that gravity increases in proportion to mass and mass increases in proportion to density. Black holes are thought to arise from the death of very massive stars. —Ability Congress Approved Glossary

Black V: a heavily occluded case characterized by mental pictures consisting of masses of blackness. This is a «Step V» in early procedures such as Standard Operating Procedure 8. —The Phoenix Lectures. (5th ACC Glossary Part 1) Final approval 2.12.89

Black V: a heavily occluded case characterized by mental pictures consisting of masses of blackness. The term black five came from application of SOP 8 (Standard Operating Procedure 8), wherein the auditor tests the preclear at each step of the process to find a step the preclear can do and begins processing at that step. A preclear who had to be started at step V of the process was called a «Case V.» This level of case could not get mock-ups but only blackness, hence «black V.» —Scientology 0-8 Glossary (app 11.7.90)

blue and pink: colors customarily used to designate whether a baby is a boy or a girl. In ancient times, the color blue was considered a precaution against evil spirits, since blue was the color of the heavenly sky. Dressing a baby boy in blue protected him from the evil spirits who wanted to cause him harm. Since girls were considered inferior, it was assumed that evil spirits would not bother with them, and they were dressed in any color. Much later, people became conscious of the lack of a special color for girls, and pink became standard for them. —State of Man Congress Approved GlS (14.5.92)

bracket: a word taken from the field of artillery, where one fires shots over and under a target so as to make sure and hit the target. Over and under, over and under, and one eventually hits the target. In Scientology processing, running something in brackets means to run something happening to the individual, and to run it happening to others because of the individual, and to have it happening to others by others. For example: (1) times when the preclear was hit over the head with a baseball bat, (2) times another person was hit over the head with a baseball bat by the preclear, (3) others being hit by others with baseball bats. That's the mechanics of the bracket. —PDC Volume 8 Approved Glossary

Over and under, over and under, and one eventually hits the target. In Scientology processing, to run something in brackets means to run something happening to the individual, to run it happening to another because of the individual, and to run it happening to others by others. An example of a five-way bracket using change would be: (1) How have you changed something? (2) How has something tried to change you? (3) How has something changed another? (4) How has another changed something? (5) How has something changed? —Melbourne Congress Approved Glossary (2.4.92)

bracket: a word taken from the field of artillery, where one fires shots over and under a target so as to make sure and hit the target. Over and under, over and under, and one eventually hits the target. In Scientology auditing, to run something in brackets means to run something happening to the individual, to run it happening to another because of the individual, and to run it happening to others by others. For example: (1) times when the preclear was hit over the head with a baseball bat, (2) times another person was hit over the head with a baseball bat by the preclear, (3) others being hit by others with baseball bats. That's the mechanics of the bracket. See also auditing in this glossary. —Conquest of Chaos Approved Glossary (8.7.92)

B routing:** the form of routing which goes via channels. With this routing, the communication is sent via your seniors and then over and down through the seniors of the terminal the comm is intended for. For example, if the Dissemination Secretary (head of Division 2) were to use B routing to send a comm to the Director of Communication (head of Department 2, Division 1), the routing on the comm would be via the HCO Executive Secretary (his senior) to the HCO Area Secretary (head of Division 1, and the Director of Communication's senior) to the Director of Communication. The other forms of routing are A, C and D routing. «A routing» goes directly across from your own post to the same post in another org—no other vias are added. «C routing» goes up the channels in your own org (and doesn't go outside the org unless one's org seniors so reroute it). «D routing» goes inside your own org directly to anyone else in the org. —Staff Status II Glossary, Approved late Sept. 1990

Chiang Kai-shek: (1887 - 1975) Chinese general and political leader. He was president of China from 1928 until he was overthrown in 1949 by Chinese communist forces. Chiang fled to Taiwan (Formosa), where he established the government of the Republic of China. Among the reasons cited for his defeat was his loss of flexibility in dealing with changing conditions. Growing more rigid, he became less responsive to popular sentiment and to new ideas. He came to prize loyalty more than competence and to rely more on personal ties than on ties of organization. His dependence on a trusted clique also showed in his army, in which he favored narrow traditionalists over many abler officers. —Conquest of Chaos Approved Glossary (8.7.92)

China: a country in east Asia which came under communist control in 1949. In 1960, a major rift developed between Communist China and Russia, which was also communist. Although both countries remained united in their hostility toward the West and in their ultimate aims, they disagreed on items of doctrine and strategy. The Chinese disagreed with the Russian emphasis on peaceful coexistence and insisted that war between the capitalist and communist systems was inevitable. The climax of the dispute between the two countries was reached at a 20-day meeting of the world's communist leaders in Moscow, Russia in November when the Chinese position on the inevitability of war was forcefully maintained. Russia subsequently withdrew all aid to China. See also communism and capitalista in this glossary. —3rd South African unpublished Appr GLS (19.3.92)

China: a country in east Asia which came under communist control in 1949. In 1960, a major rift developed between Communist China and Russia, which was also communist. Although both countries remained united in their hostility toward the West and in their ultimate aims, they disagreed on items of doctrine and strategy. The Chinese disagreed with the Russian emphasis on peaceful coexistence and insisted that war between the capitalist and communist systems was inevitable. Classification and Gradation Chart:*** short for Classification, Gradation and Awareness Chart: the route to Clear and the states beyond, also called The Bridge to Total Freedom, or the Bridge. Classification means that there are certain actions required to be done or conditions to be attained before an individual is classified for a particular training level and allowed to progress up. Gradation means a gradual grade up, just as there are grades to a road or there are grades to steps. Awareness refers to one's own awareness, which improves as one progresses up. On the right side of this chart there are various steps called the States of Release. The left-hand side of the chart describes the very important steps of training on which one gains the knowledge and abilities necessary to deliver the Grades of Release to another. It is a guide for the individual from the point where he first becomes dimly aware of a Scientologist or Scientology and shows him how and where he should move up in order to make it. Scientology contains the entire map for getting the individual through all the various points on this gradation scale and for getting him across the Bridge to higher states of existence. —OEC - Ron's Journal 38 App Mar 91

Clear: (1) (noun) the name of a state achieved through auditing or an individual who has achieved this state. Clear is a much misunderstood state of being. The word has been used before with other meanings. It has been mistaken as an absolute. It is still used. It is used here as electronics slang and can apply to a chain, an incident or a computation. Applied to an individual, it means a being who no longer has his own reactive mind. A Clear is an unaberrated person and is rational in that he forms the best possible solutions he can on the data he has and from his viewpoint. The Clear has no engrams which can be restimulated to throw out the correctness of computation by entering hidden and false data. (2) (verb) the act of desensitizing or releasing a thought impression or a series of impressions or observations in the past, or a postulate, an emotion, an effort or an entire facsimile. The preclear either releases his hold on the facsimile (memory) or the facsimile itself is desensitized. The word is taken from electronic computers or common office adding machines and describes an action similar to clearing past computations from the machine. —APA Glossary (app 11.7.90)

Clear: an individual cleared of enforced and unwanted behavior patterns and discomforts. The term Clear comes from the name of a button on a mechanical adding machine. When you push it, all the hidden answers in the machine clear and the machine can be used for a proper computation. So long as the button is not pressed, the machine adds all old answers to all new efforts to compute and wrong answers result. Really, that's all a Clear is. A Clear is a being who has been cleared of wrong or useless answers which keep a person from living or thinking. —HCOB 8 May 63 and Auditor 4 UK (Note: the word "mechanical" was added in third line to avoid confusion with computers most of which don't have such a button.) communism: a political, social and economic system in which the state, governed by an elite party, controls production, labor and distribution, and, largely, the social and cultural life and thought of the people. (Communism and socialism are systems of social organization under which the means of production and distribution of goods are transferred from private hands to the government. The classic difference between the two systems lies in the different means they take to establish themselves: communism emphasizes the impracticability of replacing the existing social order by any means other than armed force or outside intervention; the advocates of socialism seek to establish it by peaceful means, through legislation rather than force.)

- dialectical materialism: in logic, «dialectic» is the action and reaction between opposites, out of which a new synthesis (harmony of the two opposites) emerges. This was an idea originated by the German philosopher Georg Wilhelm Hegel (1770 - 1831). «Materialism» is a philosophy which maintains that there is nothing in the universe but matter, that mind is a phenomenon of matter, and that there is no ground for assuming a spiritual first cause. «Dialectical materialism» was an adaptation of these ideas by German revolutionary leader and founder of modern socialism Karl Marx (1818 - 83) into his own «general laws of motion which govern the evolution of nature and society.» He held that a conflict of opposites in human society is the evolutionary process by which a classless society would eventually be reached. —Fundamentals of Thought Glossary Final approval 5.2.90
